Welcome to this July edition of the LSCB Newsletter.

The LSCB met in July and the highlights are:

- A focus on Neglect will be a priority theme that will build on the Ofsted Thematic Report published earlier this year, with a commitment to improve the recognition and identification of Neglect, the responses that we make to referrals of Neglect, and the effectiveness of our interventions.
- Developments on Child Sexual Exploitation – with the MASE (Multi-Agency Sexual Exploitation) Panel now well established, we have produced our first Problem Profile on the issue for tri-borough: This highlights that there is no evidence of any major geographical hotspots, networks of exploitation or exploitation through trafficking and prostitution. Since January the Panel has 14 children confirmed as having suffered some form of sexual exploitation. There are higher numbers where there are risk factors for CSE, and it’s likely that a proportion of these have been sexually exploited though the evidence for this unclear; there are low numbers of confirmed exploitation in relation to gangs – thought to be under-estimating the prevalence and reflecting the reluctance of victims to make disclosures; there is little evidence of grooming through the internet; there are two examples of children being filmed.
- Sharing learning with the Frontline, in particular from Case Reviews – some sessions for all staff are being planned for September to cover key lessons from our recent case reviews.

Children’s Choice Conference
The LSCB recently held an internet safety workshop at the bi-borough Children’s Choice Conference. Children were given the opportunity to tell us what they knew about the internet in addition to learning and revising ways in which to keep themselves safe. We hope to hold more workshops like this, covering a variety of topics in the future.

Epic Children’s Forum Celebration
On Thursday 17th July at the Old Chelsea Town Hall the LSCB co-hosted a celebration event to congratulate and thank the Epic Children’s Forum for their efforts and achievement during the safety tips project.
