

National RE Updates for SACRE from RE Today Summer 2025 for Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea SACRE.

Curriculum and Assessment Review

As reported in the previous National Update, the Government is conducting a Curriculum and Assessment Review, led by Professor Becky Francis. The review aims to examine how the curriculum and assessment system can better serve young people in England.

In November 2024, NATRE submitted over 100 pieces of evidence to the review, highlighting the current challenges facing Religious Education. Other key organisations such as the Religious Education Council of England and Wales (REC), NASACRE, and AREIAC also contributed, ensuring the review panel received a broad and well-informed set of perspectives from across the RE community.

Thanks to NATRE's strong working relationships with government officials and parliamentarians, representatives were invited to attend meetings with the review panel, including a roundtable discussion with a specific focus on RE. Some of NATRE's evidence was directly included in materials presented by the panel.

In its interim report (March 2025), the review panel wrote:

"Despite the fact that RE is compulsory for all pupils up to the age of 18 (unless they are withdrawn), evidence suggests that a lack of national agreed content standards has led to national disparities in the quality of provision."

This statement reflects one of the most persistent concerns in the RE community: that provision and quality vary significantly between schools and regions, depending on school or trust policy, local authority capacity, and interpretation of legal requirements.

The panel is expected to explore in more depth the causes of these disparities and consider a range of potential solutions.

Importantly, the Department for Education has confirmed:

"The terms of reference do not prevent the Review from making recommendations for national or basic curriculum subjects that might require legislation. Ministers will take decisions on what changes to make, and how best to implement them, in light of these recommendations."

This means that policy options such as:

- Including RE in the National Curriculum (currently it is part of the basic curriculum, which is compulsory but less regulated), and/or
- Introducing a National Content Standard for RE, possibly building on the widely welcomed National Content Standard developed by the REC, are all still viable possibilities.

However, these changes alone would not address all the systemic issues in RE. As such, a comprehensive National Plan for RE remains a central policy goal—something that includes improved teacher training, accountability mechanisms, curriculum support, and long-term investment.

This set of discussion cards is offered to support groups of teachers wishing to think about the implications of the interim report for RE in their school(s). #REchatUK to Explore the Interim Curriculum and Assessment Review for Religious Education
