

Waiting and loading

Waiting restrictions are shown by single or double yellow lines along the road.

Single yellow lines are in force Monday to Saturday, usually at the same times as the controlled zone (these can be found on pay and display machines) but if times are different, they will be shown on a yellow time plate sign.

Double yellow lines mean waiting is illegal at all times.

You can stop to drop someone off, or to load or unload heavy or bulky goods, for up to 40 minutes on single or double yellow lines, unless there are loading restrictions in place. All loading must be continuous, or it may be viewed as waiting. Parking attendants will observe a vehicle for five minutes and if during this time they do not see you loading or unloading they will issue a Penalty Charge Notice.

Loading and unloading restrictions

Loading restrictions are shown by yellow 'blip' kerb markings and the hours of enforcement will be shown on a nearby white time plate sign.

When loading restrictions are in force you must not stop except to allow passengers to get into or out of your vehicle.

You are allowed to load or unload for up to 20 minutes in residents' parking bays and pay and display bays during the controlled hours, providing the loading is continuous.

Outside the hours of enforcement you may park and load or unload without restriction.

Please remember that parking restrictions do apply on bank and public holidays [1].
